

What Can the U.S. Do to Protect the Libyan People?

1. Cease Military Operations: The U.S. should end all military operations in Libya. Instead of saving civilians the war is costing tens of thousands of deaths and forcing many more to flee their homes.
2. Support Robust Diplomacy: The United States should lend its full support to coordinated diplomatic efforts by the African Union, the Arab League, and the United Nations to negotiate, implement and maintain a ceasefire in Libya. The United States should support agreed-upon regional and international peacekeeping efforts to maintain a ceasefire.
3. Support Self-determination: Libyans themselves should decide through a political process a just and lasting solution for the future of their country.
4. Continue the Arms Embargo: The international community, supported by the United States, should continue to stop the delivery of weapons to the warring parties in Libya.
5. Provide Humanitarian Assistance: The United States should join with the international community to ensure unimpeded access by humanitarian agencies capable of provided urgently-needed assistance and protection to those in need both within Libya and in neighboring countries.
